DISSERTATION

“Women, Reading, and Literary Culture: The Reception of Christine de Pizan in Fifteenth-Century England”

Committee: David Wallace (chair), Emily Steiner, and Kevin Brownlee

This project investigates the circulation of works by Christine de Pizan, a prolific Parisian author, in fifteenth-century England. The project challenges the concept of literary communities defined by national boundaries, arguing that men and women in England imagined themselves as members of a transcontinental, multilingual reading community.
